ACADEMIC PROJECTS

- Project 1: Conducted a survey and presented a research project on "depression, anxiety and stress among teenagers during the lockdown" under the professors of the Department of Anthropology, University of Delhi. The survey included around 200 students from around the country, primarily from the states of Jammu, Nagaland, Delhi, and Odisha.
As a surveyor, my role was to conduct interviews and educate the respondents on how to undertake the survey form we created and then match the individually calculated values of stress, anxiety, and depression levels with those of the universal standards set by health organizations.
- Project 2: Research and tackle the question statement "impact of climate change on the world in general and India in particular." My role was to closely study the problem statement, research, collect primary and secondary data, and review pre-existing literature to help understand the impact better.
- Project 3: Currently working on a dissertation titled 'Translating Identity in Literature', which examines how identities are altered or lost in the process of translation – ultimately transforming the narratology of the original story and repositioning it within an entirely new genre.
